Enabling Devices Introduces the Choice 4 Communicator
A transitional communicator that grows with you.

Hastings-On-Hudson, NY – January 30, 2008 – Enabling Devices today announced the release of its latest communicator, the Choice 4. The Choice 4 is a great transitional communicator – it is designed to grow with users as they develop more sophisticated communication skills. With more than a dozen exciting features, the Choice 4 Communicator is also versatile – it provides access to communication by people with a wide variety of special needs.

According to Steven Kanor, Ph.D., President of Enabling Devices: “we created the Choice 4 with the idea of introducing a unique, innovative device that clearly presents communicative materials.”

Gail Cocciardi, Director of Product Development, says: “we developed the Choice 4 so that therapists and teachers can easily individualize a child’s learning according to his or her needs. You can start simply with one object and one field and build up to using objects, photographs and icons in all four fields.”

Features include:

- Holds Objects, Photographs and Icons – use one, two or all three depending on the child’s abilities and build from there.
- Super bright lights illuminate objects, photographs and icons.
- Icon fields can be covered to limit the number of choices. Fields can be increased as the child becomes more proficient.
- Access via Direct Select or by Single Switch. Communicator also scans and has auditory cueing.
- Three broadcast options allow you to use speakers only, headphones only, or speaker and headphones simultaneously.
- 12 Levels with 300 Seconds of Total Recording Time
